Woodland Wildlife Program ~ Thursday-Friday, April 6-7, 2006 NEW!!

Michigan hosts many diverse forest ecosystems covering vast expanses of the state. In this program, a variety of live Michigan mammals, birds, and reptiles that inhabit Michigan forests will help to demonstrate the significant role that forests play in maintaining biodiversity and providing a wide array of forest products. While forests are a renewable resource, they need our care to protect and conserve them.

PRESENTER: The programs will be conducted by Jesse Gabbard (jgabbard@mucc.org), education specialist at the Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC). Jesse has a BS in Animal Science and has worked as a research technician on projects involving sea lamprey and the Eastern massasaga rattlesnake.
